I. Introduction/overview

1. The International Classification of Activities for Time-Use Statistics (ICATUS) is a classification of all the activities on which a person may spend time during the 24 hours in a day. Its purpose is to serve as a standard framework for time-use statistics based on activities grouped in a meaningful way.
2. ICATUS provides a framework with standardized concepts and definitions for the systematic dissemination of internationally comparable time-use statistics, regardless of the type of instruments used for data collection. ICATUS can be further used to guide the collection of time-use data or adapted into countries' classifications reflecting national context and needs.
3. ICATUS has been developed on the basis of internationally agreed concepts, definitions and principles in order to improve the consistency and international comparability of time-use and other social and economic statistics. Reliable time-use statistics have been critical for: (a) the measurement and analysis of quality of life or general well-being; (b) a more comprehensive measurement of all forms of work, including unpaid work and non-market production, and the development of household production accounts; and (c) the production of data for gender analysis for public policies. Hence, the link and consistency between ICATUS and the System of National Accounts (SNA) and the definition and framework for labour statistics by the 19th International Conference of Labour Statisticians (ICLS) is important.
4. In addition, ICATUS will serve as an important input for monitoring progress made towards the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals and targets, including target 5.4, which aims at “recogniz[ing] and valu[ing] unpaid care and domestic work through the provision of public services, infrastructure and social protection policies and the promotion of shared responsibility within the household and the family as nationally appropriate” and the related indicator 5.4.1 on the proportion of time spent on unpaid domestic and care work, by sex, age and location.<sup>1</sup>

II. What is ICATUS 2016?

5. The International Classification of Activities for Time-Use Statistics 2016 (ICATUS 2016) was endorsed by the United Nations Statistical Commission for use as an international statistical classification during its forty-eighth session, from 7 to 10 March 2017, in its decision 48/109. ICATUS 2016 is a three-level hierarchical classification (composed of major divisions, divisions and groups) of all possible activities undertaken by the general population during the 24 hours in a day. The purpose of the classification is to provide a framework that can be used to produce meaningful and comparable statistics on time use across countries and over time.
6. ICATUS was developed following the principles of statistical classifications<sup>2,3</sup> and the characteristics of a good classification<sup>4</sup> as recommended by the Expert Group on International Statistical Classifications and as explained in the paragraphs below.

7. Mutually exclusive and exhaustive categories. ICATUS can be used to classify each activity into one category of the classification without duplication or omission. The description of each category provides guidance on what should be included or excluded. The use of contextual variables (explained below) to be collected in the time-use surveys will provide additional information to correctly classify activities. For example, the additional information on the purpose (contextual variable) of a productive activity will help to differentiate between activities “for pay or profit” from those “intended for own final use”.
8. Comparability with other related (national and international) standard classifications. The development of ICATUS drew upon international, regional and country experiences on time-use statistics and related classifications (see sect. IV). The categories included in the current version of ICATUS (see sect. XIII) are comparable to those in the trial version of ICATUS<sup>5</sup> and other classifications. Therefore, this ensures comparability over time between current and previous versions of the classification.<sup>6</sup>
9. Categories are stable. ICATUS has been developed in line with the most recent statistical concepts and standards. It is believed that current categories will remain unchanged unless major methodological developments are reflected.
10. Categories are well described. ICATUS categories have titles that are in a standard format and their explanations clearly mention which activities should be included and which should be excluded. The classification is backed by the necessary documentation. In addition, the Statistical Commission, at its forty-eighth session, supported the proposal to develop methodological guidelines on how to operationalize ICATUS 2016 and produce time-use statistics using the latest technologies. The Statistics Division plans to update and pilot in selected countries a set of guidelines for producing time-use statistics, based on ICATUS 2016, by 2022.
11. Categories are well balanced (i.e. not too many or too few categories). ICATUS has 165 groups classified into 56 divisions and 9 major divisions, which represents a manageable number of categories facilitating the usability of the classification.<sup>7</sup>
12. All the above-mentioned principles and characteristics ensure the statistical feasibility of ICATUS, so that it is possible to effectively, accurately and consistently distinguish between the categories in the classification on the basis of the information available.<sup>8</sup> In addition, to further ensure statistical feasibility, ICATUS 2016 was tested in a number of countries: the classification was piloted by being applied to existing time-use data (see para. 29).
13. The basic principle that ICATUS applies in classifying activities is that daily activities can be categorized into those considered productive and those considered personal activities or “non-productive” from an economic point of view. The resulting structure highlights time spent on all forms of work as well as time spent by people on personal activities to obtain statistics on time spent studying, socializing, exercising and on many other activities defining the general well-being of the population. A later section describes the specific criteria used in defining the various categories of activities, as well as how ICATUS can be adapted for national purposes.

<sup>6</sup> However, ICATUS 2016 is aligned with the forms of work as defined in the 19th ICLS resolution. Previously, in the trial version of ICATUS, no distinction was made between production of goods for the market and for own final use.

<sup>7</sup> In comparison, the trial ICATUS had 15 major divisions, 54 divisions, 92 groups, 200 classes and 363 subclasses. See sect. VI for a summary of the changes.

III. Background

14. In 1995, at its twenty-eighth session, the Statistical Commission<sup>9</sup> emphasized the value of time-use statistics for addressing a range of national and international socioeconomic concerns, including gender equality, and requested that a draft classification of time-use activities be prepared by the Statistics Division as a basis for further research and special studies. The same year, in the Platform for Action adopted by the Fourth World Conference on Women,<sup>10</sup> national, regional and international statistical services and relevant governmental and United Nations agencies were asked to work to “improve data collection on the full contribution of women and men to the economy” and to “develop an international classification of activities for time-use statistics that is sensitive to the differences between women and men in remunerated and unremunerated work, and collect data disaggregated by sex”. Following those requests, the Division convened the First Expert Group Meeting on the topic in 1997 and developed a draft classification in consultation with experts and relevant stakeholders to assist countries interested in conducting time-use studies. Experts recognized that the classification would provide a basis on which data from time-use surveys would be coded in meaningful categories in order to: assess the national labour inputs into production of goods and services; compile household satellite accounts; and analyse trends of uses of time. Two main principles were identified for the construction of the classification:
- (a) Consistency with SNA to allow calculation of aggregates for satellite accounts;
  - (b) Comparability with other existing time-use classifications.
15. Based on the experience of countries that used or adapted the 1997 draft classification, and on recommendations from the Second Expert Group Meeting, organized in 2000, a revised and more elaborated version was developed and published in the Guide to Producing Statistics on Time Use: Measuring Paid and Unpaid Work (United Nations, 2005) as the trial International Classification of Activities for Time-Use Statistics (ICATUS).
16. Many countries that adopted or adapted the trial version of ICATUS expressed interest in finalizing ICATUS, based on their experiences in using the classification. In 2011, the Statistical Commission agreed to the tasks specified in paragraph 46 of the report of the Ghana Statistical Service on the production and updating of manuals and reference materials on time use, among other areas relevant for the analysis of gender issues.<sup>11</sup>
17. The Statistics Division organized the Third Expert Group Meeting in June 2012 to finalize ICATUS, taking into account the experiences and needs of several countries that adapted it (either the draft or the trial version) for use in their data collection, tabulations and analysis of time-use statistics, including Argentina, Bangladesh, Brazil, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Egypt, Ethiopia, Ghana, India, Iran (Islamic Republic of), Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, the Philippines, South Africa, Thailand, the United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of) and the State of Palestine.
18. The Third Expert Group Meeting recognized the many purposes behind the national time-use surveys and the challenge in identifying an international classification of activities for time-use statistics that can satisfy all purposes, such as measuring extended national accounts, workforce, unpaid work, work-life balance, well-being, gender equality and time poverty. The Expert Group acknowledged the importance of ICATUS as an umbrella classification broadly classifying time-use activities, applicable in both developed and developing countries, and adaptable to countries' own context by expanding categories (blocks) as needed. The Expert Group also welcomed the classification as a “dissemination framework” for time-use statistics that was relevant for both social and economic policies and internationally comparable.<sup>12</sup>

19. The decisions taken during the Third Expert Group Meeting and comments received from national statistical offices and other experts after that meeting are summarized in the following paragraphs:
- (a) ICATUS should be developed on the basis of the concept of productive activities following the SNA framework, as requested by many countries and other experts. Indeed, time-use surveys are particularly useful for capturing all forms of work: work in the household sector as well as work that is not accounted for in national accounts, such as unpaid domestic work and caring. Alignment with SNA was a strategic decision taken by experts since the first version of ICATUS was developed in 1997;
  - (b) Activities should be grouped into a simplified three-digit code structure (rather than five digits as in ICATUS 2005) to facilitate its implementation at the national level; ICATUS structure should also allow conversions into other existing time-use classifications;
  - (c) Time-use surveys should be used not to reproduce/replace labour force surveys, but rather as an additional source of data to identify the activities within the SNA production boundary that may risk being misclassified as non-economic, or simply not being counted, and to allow measurement of satellite accounts on unpaid household work;
  - (d) While it is recognized that some countries (mainly developing ones) are using time-use surveys to also gather better and/or complementary information on their labour force, ICATUS needs to also be relevant in developed countries where time-use surveys are conducted mainly to produce well-being and gender-relevant statistics, and for broader time-use research that focuses more on time activities than on their economic/non-economic nature.
20. In 2013, the 19th ICLS adopted the resolution concerning statistics of work, employment and labour underutilization, which updated the resolution concerning statistics of the economically active population, employment, unemployment and underemployment, adopted by the 13th ICLS, in 1982, to address limitations of underemployment statistics and the criticisms of employment as too broad a measure, and to provide measures of labour underutilization beyond employment, among others.
21. The 19th ICLS resolution defined “work” as any activity carried out by persons of any sex and age to produce goods or to provide services for use by others or for own use, irrespective of legality, the formal/informal nature of activity, context or a person's status. That definition is consistent with the scope of productive activities and is aligned with the general production boundary (SNA 2008). The concept of employment became narrower with the adoption of the resolution, given that the production of goods for own final use (including subsistence activities) is currently excluded from employment. However, new forms of work were identified in the resolution (e.g. unpaid trainee work).

<sup>12</sup> See the report of the Expert Group Meeting on the Revision of the United Nations International Classification of Activities for Time-Use Statistics (ICATUS) (ESA/STAT/AC.254/L4). Available at http://unstats.un.org/unsd/demographic/meetings/egm/EGM%20June%202012/list\_of\_docs.htm.

22. After the Third Expert Group Meeting, a consultation process with the International Labour Organization (ILO) and other experts took place to align ICATUS with the definition of work and its different forms as adopted by the 19th ICLS. The alignment of the work-related activities in ICATUS with the 19th ICLS forms of work is important because time-use surveys may identify some activities in employment that are difficult to capture in labour force surveys. Furthermore, as mentioned above, time-use surveys are the principal source of data on forms of work beyond the SNA production boundary (caring for household members and domestic work).
23. The following considerations were made when incorporating the 19th ICLS definition of work into ICATUS:
- (a) Employment includes work for payment or profit in many different types of production units, such as: (i) employment in corporations, government and non-profit institutions; (ii) employment in household enterprises to produce goods; and (iii) employment in households and household enterprises to provide services, including paid domestic services. Given the difficulties in capturing/estimating the household production (also for the main accounts in SNA), there was a need to give full visibility to this sector of production (household production for pay/profit) in ICATUS, because these activities represent a large proportion of informal employment and a large proportion of total employment in many developing countries;
  - (b) Although it is recognized that trying to separate household production between what is intended “for pay or profit” and what is “intended for own final use” is challenging, ILO has undertaken methodological developments for the implementation of the 19th ICLS resolution and related pilot testing in selected countries. ILO is also planning to develop a set of preliminary guidelines on how to distinguish between employment and own-use production work that will inform the development of questions for time-use survey background questionnaires and of contextual variables to be included in diaries.
24. The resulting version of ICATUS was circulated among experts in countries, international organizations and other entities for their feedback and comments during the first half of 2016. During this virtual consultation process, comments were received from 19 Member States (Armenia, Canada, China, Colombia, Finland, Ghana, Italy, Kazakhstan, Mexico, Morocco, New Zealand, Nigeria, Republic of Moldova, South Africa, Thailand, Turkey, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America and State of Palestine), four international organizations (ILO, International Telecommunication Union, Eurostat, UNESCO Institute for Statistics) and one regional commission (Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC)), four experts from other entities (Centre for Development Alternatives, Centre for Time Use Research, International Association for Time Use Research, Women in Informal Employment: Globalizing and Organizing) and Deborah Budlender, an international time-use expert. Experts appreciated the consultation and welcomed the latest version of ICATUS. The main comments received were concentrated in the following areas:
- (a) Experts expressed concerns regarding: (i) the limited activities defined under division 12, Employment in unincorporated enterprises and households, compared with the very detailed activities under major divisions 2 and 3; and (ii) the feasibility of differentiating between production for the market and production for own final use;
  - (b) Experts mentioned that more detailed activities were needed under the major division dedicated to care work, given that this information is used for the construction of satellite accounts. There were concerns about the very detailed list of activities under volunteering, and experts questioned the feasibility of collecting data for each of the categories;

- (c) Experts questioned the relevance of some categories under the major divisions dedicated to personal activities;
  - (d) Experts also had different views on cross-cutting activities (travel) and other aspects of the classification (use of information and communications technology (ICT)).
25. Comments received during the consultation were subsequently incorporated into the version of ICATUS that was reviewed at the Fourth Expert Group Meeting, in June 2016, which was organized to discuss and agree on the major areas of concern identified during the virtual consultation. The main decisions taken during the Fourth Expert Group Meeting are summarized as follows:<sup>13</sup>
- (a) Experts reaffirmed the importance of time-use surveys to collect information on many policy concerns, in particular on unpaid work, including unpaid economic activities for the production of services that are beyond the SNA production boundary, and agreed on the importance of aligning ICATUS with SNA and the resolution concerning statistics of work, employment and labour underutilization, adopted in 2013 by the 19th ICLS;
  - (b) Experts stressed the importance of capturing the time spent on activities related to employment in households and household enterprises in time-use surveys and of properly highlighting them in ICATUS through detailed groups under major division 1, which covers employment;
  - (c) It was noted that many of the detailed activity groups specified in divisions 12 and 13<sup>14</sup> were aligned with relevant categories in the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (rev.4). Experts agreed that this would promote coherence between time-use statistics and statistics on employment and industrial production classified by economic activity. However, they cautioned on potential confusion resulting from the fact that the economic activity of a worker at a particular point in time may differ from the primary activity of the establishment where he or she works. It was agreed to stress this point in all ICATUS documentation by noting that the unit classified in time-use statistics (the time spent by individuals on a given activity) was not the same as the economic units classified in employment and production statistics, typically the establishment;
  - (d) It was pointed out by experts that, since time-use surveys cannot properly capture the formality/informality of work or the legality of the production unit, any distinctions based on “formality/informality” or “registered/unregistered” status of economic units should be avoided in the terminology used in ICATUS;
  - (e) Experts agreed that time-use surveys are a good instrument for collecting information on the use of ICT, particularly if additional information is available on the purpose and/or activity using ICT. As a consequence, the group recommended adding a contextual variable on the use of ICT while carrying out relevant activities over a 24-hour period. Experts agreed that until diary instruments can be sufficiently developed to distinguish Internet use from non-Internet use in connection with the activity, it is preferable to include only a contextual variable identifying use of an ICT “device”. Experts agreed that activities should be classified according to the activity (or purpose) for which time is spent (for example, if a person is shopping through social media, the activity should be classified as shopping). Furthermore, the group discouraged the use of a specific activity code in ICATUS and requested that group 844, Using ICT, be deleted, since this would probably include only residual time passed using ICT that cannot be properly classified elsewhere;

<sup>13</sup> See the report of the Fourth Expert Group Meeting on the revision and finalization of the International Classification of Activities for Time-Use Statistics (ICATUS) (ESA/STAT/AC.321/L3). Available at http://unstats.un.org/unsd/gender/Events/28-30\_June\_2016/default.html.

- (f) Regarding the recording of travel time, experts noted the importance of gathering information on the purpose of travel and mode of transportation and agreed to keep travel time within each major division, as currently classified in ICATUS. “Waiting” time should be coded together with the main activity associated with waiting.
26. Subsequent comments on ICATUS 2016 and its extended explanatory notes developed after the June 2016 Expert Group Meeting were received, including through the global consultation on the finalization of ICATUS 2016, which was held between October and November 2016. All national statistical offices were contacted in writing, and 43 provided comments on the classification (Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Belarus, Bolivia (Plurinational State of), Botswana, Canada, Colombia, Costa Rica, Croatia, Egypt, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Hungary, India, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand, Nigeria, Norway, Papua New Guinea, Poland, Romania, Serbia, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, United States of America, Viet Nam and State of Palestine) together with three organizations (ILO, Economic and Social Commission for West Asia and Centre for Development Alternatives).
27. During the global consultation, Member States welcomed the opportunity to provide input to ICATUS 2016 and recognized the great efforts and work undertaken to reflect contributions and feedback received. Among their comments, several countries noted the possibility of easily coding existing national time-use data into ICATUS 2016, proving the feasibility of the classification.
28. Several countries, mainly developed ones, noted that the classification might be too detailed in some areas. In contrast, other countries suggested the inclusion of additional and more detailed categories, particularly to capture the differences in involvement/participation of and time spent by men and women. Given that ICATUS 2016 aims to be an international classification, relevant for developed and developing countries, the balance among the categories was carefully evaluated and was a key element in the revision of ICATUS. The proposed structure of ICATUS 2016 reflects the many years of discussion with experts on time-use statistics and statistical classifications, data users and other stakeholders. In addition, the classification may be expanded or contracted for countries to reflect their own national context and data needs (see sect. XI below).
29. In parallel to the global consultation, selected countries had been invited to pilot ICATUS 2016, using their existing time-use data. Although these data had not been collected according to ICATUS 2016, this pilot exercise helped to identify missing and/or irrelevant categories for the production of time-use statistics in the selected countries. The pilot countries are Australia, Chile, Mexico, South Africa, Thailand and the United States of America (Bureau of Labor Statistics).
30. The major decision taken after reviewing the comments from the global consultation and results from the pilots related to the residual categories. Although some experts considered the classification as having many residual categories, classification experts recommended keeping those categories as a placeholder for residual or additional responses that would not fit into the available defined categories where relevant.
31. Furthermore, the Expert Group on International Statistical Classifications<sup>15</sup> reviewed and provided comments on ICATUS 2016. Comments received during the global consultation and from the Expert Group were incorporated into ICATUS 2016, and the complete classification was presented to the Statistical Commission at its forty-eighth session, from 7 to 10 March 2017, and endorsed in its decision 48/109 for use as an international statistical classification.

IV. Relationship between ICATUS 2016 and other statistical classifications and relevant international standards

32. ICATUS is designed to be consistent with existing international standards and classifications:

- (a) The definition of activities according to their productive status is in line with SNA 2008;<sup>16</sup>
- (b) The resolution concerning statistics of work, employment and labour underutilization, adopted by the 19th ICLS in October 2013<sup>17</sup>, has also been used to classify productive activities;
- (c) Definitions and categories of activities are in line with standard economic classifications such as the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (rev.4).

V. Other statistical classifications for time-use statistics

33. Regional classifications for time-use statistics have been developed and implemented in Europe and Latin America and the Caribbean:

- (a) The Harmonised European Time Use Surveys (HETUS) contain an activity coding list, which is a three-level hierarchical classification.<sup>18</sup> Although the structures used in ICATUS and HETUS differ, it emerged from numerous consultations that it would be relatively easy to move from one classification to the other. The Eurostat Time-Use Working Group plans to finalize the review of the HETUS activity coding list by 2019;<sup>19</sup>
- (b) The Classification of Time-Use Activities for Latin America and the Caribbean (CAUTAL) was presented for the first time in 2009 during a technical meeting. It was a five-level hierarchical classification developed for countries in the region.<sup>20</sup> The classification was revised and presented by the Working Group on Gender Statistics to the Statistical Conference of the Americas of ECLAC during its eighth meeting, in 2015, where it was adopted.<sup>21,22</sup>

34. In addition, many countries, including Australia,<sup>23</sup> New Zealand<sup>24</sup> and the United States of America,<sup>25</sup> have developed their own classifications for time-use statistics.
35. Finally, given that ICATUS 2016 covers productive and personal activities, it is possible to compare ICATUS 2016 activities with the four types of activities defined by Dagfinn Ås (1978) and the broad level categories recommended in the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) Guidelines for Harmonizing Time-Use Surveys (2013).<sup>26</sup>

VI. Summary of changes from the previous version of ICATUS

36. ICATUS 2016 differs from the trial ICATUS published in 2005 in the following aspects:
- (a) Its structure has been simplified and the latest version of the classification has only three levels and nine major divisions;
  - (b) The terminology used has been aligned with existing international standards;
  - (c) The explanatory notes have been updated to reflect new international definitions and standards and to provide examples of activities to include/exclude in each category.

Table 1 Differences in structure between the trial ICATUS and ICATUS 2016

Structure	Trial ICATUS 2005<sup>a</sup>	ICATUS 2016

Subclasses	363	–

37. In particular, the first part of ICATUS, which covers all productive activities, was extensively revised to: (a) simplify the structure of the classification to reflect comments received from national and international experts; and (b) align it with the ICLS resolution concerning statistics of work, employment and labour underutilization.

VII. Objects/units classified and classification concept

38. The aim of ICATUS is to serve as a standard classification of activities that a person can engage in during the 24 hours in a day. Activities are defined as tasks undertaken by persons. Time units are used for producing statistics on the amount of time spent in certain activities.

39. A person can engage in two or more activities at the same time, also called “simultaneous activities”. In applying the classification, countries will have to determine how these activities are to be recorded and coded. When activities occur simultaneously, countries have a choice as to whether they will record only one (the main or primary activity) or both, in line with the survey’s objectives.

VIII. Classification criteria

40. The main classification criterion that has been used in the construction of ICATUS is the “productive” nature of an activity. Daily activities can be categorized into those considered productive and those considered non-productive (personal activities) from an economic/SNA point of view. An activity is said to be productive or fall within the general production boundary if it satisfies the third-person criterion (i.e. the activity can be delegated to another person and yield the same desired results).
41. Productive activities can be distinguished into two types:
- (a) Those within the SNA production boundary;
  - (b) Those outside the SNA production boundary but within the general production boundary (non-SNA production).
42. Activities within the SNA production boundary are more limited than those in the general production boundary and include only:<sup>27</sup>
- (a) Production of goods and services that are supplied to units other than their producers;
  - (b) Own-account production of all goods that are retained by their producers for their own final consumption or gross capital formation;
  - (c) Own-account production of knowledge-capturing products that are retained by their producers for their own final consumption or gross capital formation but excluding (by convention) such products produced by households for their own use;<sup>28</sup>
  - (d) Own-account production of housing services by owner occupiers;
  - (e) Production of domestic and personal services by employing paid domestic staff.

Non-SNA production within the general production boundary includes the production of services by members of the household for their own final consumption.

43. In addition, the ILO framework for work statistics was used as a basis to further classify productive activities. Work comprises any activity carried out by persons of any sex and age to produce goods or to provide services for use by others or for own use.<sup>29</sup> Five forms of work have been identified:<sup>30</sup>
- (a) Own-use production work (goods and services for own final use; the intended destination of the output is mainly for final use of the producer in the form of capital formation, or final consumption by household members or by family members living in other households; in the case of agricultural, fishing, hunting or gathering goods intended mainly for own consumption, a part or surplus may nevertheless be sold or bartered);
  - (b) Employment (produce goods or provide services for pay or profit);

<sup>28</sup> Knowledge-capturing products concern the provision, storage, communication and dissemination of information, advice and entertainment in such a way that the consuming unit can access the knowledge repeatedly. See System of National Accounts 2008, para. 6.22.

- (c) Unpaid trainee work (any unpaid activity to produce goods or provide services for others, in order to acquire workplace experience or skills in a trade or profession);
- (d) Volunteer work (any unpaid, non-compulsory activity to produce goods or provide services for others);
- (e) Other forms of work, such as unpaid community service and unpaid work by prisoners when ordered by a court or similar authority, and unpaid military or alternative civilian service, which may be treated as a distinct form of work for measurement purposes (such as compulsory work carried out without pay for others).

44. Personal activities, as in the trial version, are classified according to the nature of the activity (e.g. learning, socializing and satisfying physiological needs).
45. Based on these criteria, activities were grouped into nine major divisions, the first five covering the different productive activities and forms of work and the remaining four covering personal activities:

Table 2 Major Divisions in ICATUS 2016

Major division	Activity
1	Employment and related activities
2	Production of goods for own final use
3	Unpaid domestic services for household and family members
4	Unpaid caregiving services for household and family members
5	Unpaid volunteer, trainee and other unpaid work
6	Learning
7	Socializing and communication, community participation and religious practice
8	Culture, leisure, mass media and sports practices
9	Self-care and maintenance

Additional clarifying points are set out in the paragraphs below.

46. In order to stress the importance of capturing the time spent on activities in household enterprises/household employment through time-use surveys and the need to properly highlight these activities in ICATUS, employment under major division 1 was subdivided into three detailed groups to differentiate work undertaken in corporations,<sup>31</sup> government and non-profit institutions from the work undertaken in household enterprises and households. The work undertaken in household enterprises and households was further classified to distinguish between the production of goods from the provision of services. This resulted in the following divisions:
- 11 Employment in corporations, government and non-profit institutions
  - 12 Employment in household enterprises to produce goods
  - 13 Employment in households and household enterprises to provide services
47. The detailed activity groups specified under divisions 12 and 13 are aligned with relevant categories in the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (rev.4), to ensure coherence between time-use statistics and statistics on employment and industrial production classified by economic activity.
48. Activities under major division 2 have been defined to support national accounts and the analysis of household own-use production work, including subsistence foodstuff producers.
49. Detailed activities under major division 4, Unpaid caregiving services for household and family members, are important for understanding the needs of care within the households and inform policies to support these needs, and for valuing unpaid care work. The importance of distinguishing between the care provided to very young children, for example those aged 5 or under, and the care provided to older children between the ages of 6 and 17, given the different intensity and type of care required, is recognized. In order to collect data that reflect such distinction, it is advised to specify the age groups in the contextual variable “with whom”, as already recommended by HETUS and done in selected countries. ICATUS 2016 does not distinguish in its structure between caring for children with disabilities and caring for other children, since all children require care/supervision. However, information on children with disabilities might be collected through relevant questions in the background questionnaire of the time-use survey.
50. Unpaid work carried out for “related family members” not living in the same household was widely discussed, for example time spent by grandparents taking care of their grandchildren not living in the same household. According to the 19th ICLS, this type of work carried out for related family members should not be considered “volunteering” and is consequently included in ICATUS 2016 under major division 4.
51. The reference to the concept of “family” was retained (although there is no internationally agreed definition of “family”) to be consistent with the wording of the 19th ICLS resolution. In ICATUS, care of “related family members” includes those activities undertaken for family members belonging to another household, either to comply with the law or out of love/moral obligations (to avoid the classification of certain activities, e.g. childcare undertaken by grandparents, as volunteering).
52. Depending on the activities and beneficiaries, unpaid volunteer work could be considered either within the SNA production boundary or within the general production boundary. All volunteer work for producing goods (including community-organized major construction, inter alia, of roads, dams and wells) is classified as being within the SNA production boundary. Unpaid volunteering work to produce services for the market is also within the SNA production boundary. By contrast, unpaid volunteer services to other households, to the community (except organized major construction as noted above), to neighbourhood associations and to other informal associations are activities within the general production boundary but outside the SNA production boundary. However, countries have reported that volunteering as an activity is difficult to capture through time-use surveys, given its rarity, and as a result, ICATUS may not be able to fully distinguish between volunteering activities within the SNA production boundary and those within the general production boundary but outside the SNA production boundary. Nevertheless, experts agreed that the proposed relevant categories would still produce meaningful statistics on total time spent on volunteering.

<sup>31</sup> In the legal sense, corporations may be described by different names: corporations, incorporated enterprises, public limited companies, public corporations, private companies, joint-stock companies, limited liability companies and limited liability partnerships, etc. See System of National Accounts 2008, para. 4.7.

53. Activities under major division 6, Learning, were specifically discussed and agreed with the UNESCO Institute for Statistics. A new category distinguishing “extracurricular activities” from “school/university attendance” was agreed; however, extracurricular activities involving physical or sports-related activities will be classified under major division 8, Culture, leisure, mass media and sports practices. All the “related courses” previously included under major division 8 are now classified under major division 6, Learning.
54. Several categories were considered too specific for their inclusion in the international classification:
  - (a) “Negative social activities”, “begging” and “smoking” were removed;
  - (b) “Visiting library” was considered as too broad and referring only to a context and was therefore removed;
  - (c) Groups under “Activities associated with reflecting, resting, relaxing” were merged into a single division (with no further groups), and the division was reclassified from major division 9 to major division 8.
55. The experts agreed that time spent on social media should be classified under the activity (or purpose) for which time is spent. For example, if a person is shopping through a social media platform, the activity should be classified as shopping.
56. Regarding the recording of travel time, the importance of gathering information on the purpose of travel and mode of transportation is recognized, and categories related to travel remain under each major division.
57. Time spent on “waiting” will be reported within its related activity. However, the measurement of “waiting” as an intrinsic activity can be valuable under certain circumstances, especially in the context of time stress/poverty. In this case, countries should allocate a specific code (and related explanatory notes) for “waiting” in their national classification.

Note: Text in the “ICATUS 2016” row corresponds to the categories (major divisions or divisions) from the classification.

<sup>a</sup> “Production of goods for own final use” is within the SNA production boundary and part of the main national accounts. Therefore, despite being unpaid household work, it is not accounted in the calculation of household production satellite accounts, which cover only unpaid household service work.

<sup>b</sup> Depending on the activities and beneficiaries, unpaid volunteer work could be considered either within the SNA production boundary or within the general production boundary. All volunteer work for producing goods (including community-organized major construction, inter alia, of roads, dams and wells) is classified as being within the SNA production boundary. Unpaid volunteering work to produce services for the market is also accounted within the SNA production boundary. In contrast, unpaid volunteer services to other households, to the community (except organized major construction as noted above), to neighbourhood associations and to other informal associations are activities within the general production boundary but outside the SNA production boundary. As a result, ICATUS categories may not be able to fully distinguish between volunteering activities within the SNA production boundary and those outside it. Nevertheless, experts agreed that ICATUS relevant categories would still produce meaningful statistics on total time spent on volunteering.

IX. Information required for coding: contextual variables

58. In order to correctly classify activities in ICATUS in a mutually exclusive manner, information about the context in which the activity is carried out is necessary. Experts during the Expert Group Meeting in 2012 identified four core contextual variables to be collected:
- “For whom” the activity was carried out;
  - Whether the activity was “for pay or profit” (i.e. intended for the market);
  - “With whom” the activity was carried out;
  - The location where the activity was carried out.

Furthermore, information should also be collected on whether an ICT device was used when carrying out the activity (see para. 25 (e)).

59. For whom: a “for whom” context variable, for example, would be needed to identify unpaid work within the household (provision of services for own/family use) and unpaid work outside the household, such as volunteering. For example, unpaid domestic work and caregiving activities are under different major divisions, depending on whether the activity is carried out for own household members or for others.

60. Paid/unpaid:<sup>32</sup> to be able to distinguish employment from volunteering, for example, would require a context variable identifying the economic purpose of the activity (if the activity is paid or unpaid).
61. With whom: eating in a restaurant with a friend should be classified as socializing, but eating with a business partner may be a work activity (e.g. a lunch meeting).
62. Location: “location” is given as a generic description of where respondents are (home, work, school, etc.). If they are travelling, “location” is defined in terms of how they are travelling (by car, on foot, by bus).
63. Further details on the use of these contextual variables can be found in the Guide to Producing Statistics on Time Use: Measuring Paid and Unpaid Work.<sup>33</sup>
64. Finally, additional information will have to be collected in a time-use background questionnaire to properly classify activities into the correct category. Therefore, special attention should be paid to the design of background questionnaires.<sup>34</sup> The Statistics Division plans to update and pilot in selected countries a set of guidelines for producing statistics on time use by 2022. The guidelines will be based on the 2005 Guide to Producing Statistics on Time Use: Measuring Paid and Unpaid Work; the 2013 ECE Guidelines for Harmonizing Time-Use Surveys; the forthcoming ILO guidelines on operationalizing the 19th ICLS; and other relevant materials (see sect. XII).

X. How to use ICATUS in coding and classification rules

65. ICATUS 2016 groups activities into three levels as follows:
- (a) The first level, one-digit code or “major division” represents the least detailed level or the broadest group of activities;
  - (b) The second level, two-digit code or “division” represents more detailed activities than the preceding one;
  - (c) The third level, three-digit code or “group” is considered the most detailed level of the classification detailing specific activities.
66. Activities are to be coded to the most detailed level (group). For the divisions that are not further broken down into specified three-digit groups, the two-digit codes have been converted to three-digit codes by adding a zero.

<sup>32</sup> “Unpaid” is defined as the absence of remuneration in cash or in kind for work carried out or hours worked; nevertheless, these workers may receive some form of support, such as transfers of education stipends or grants, or occasional support in cash when below one third of local market wages (e.g. for out-of-pocket expenses or to cover living expenses incurred for the activity) or in-kind support (e.g. a meal, drinks, transportation).

<sup>34</sup> Information on the sector of the production units (corporations, non-profit institutions, government, unincorporated enterprises and households) will need to be collected in order to properly classify different types of work.

Table 2 Rules to be followed by countries in coding activities

Rule 1	Code up to three digits according to the activity coding index
Rule 2	If an activity is described well enough to be coded to the three-digit level but no corresponding three-digit activity description is found in the coding index, use the three-digit “other activities”, which usually ends in “9”. If this particular activity is reported relatively often, it may warrant adding a new code in the country adaptation of ICATUS
Rule 3	If the activity description does not have enough information so that it is not possible to select a three-digit code:	Rule 3a	If there is sufficient information for coding at the two-digit level, then add/use a three-digit code ending with one “x”, which corresponds to the “not fully defined (n.f.d.)” category at the group level
		Rule 3b	If there is insufficient information for coding even at the two-digit or division level, then add/use the “not fully defined (n.f.d.)” category at the division level
		Rule 3c	If there is insufficient information for coding even to one of the tabulation categories, add/use code “999”

XI. Adaptation of ICATUS

67. The proposed ICATUS has been developed for use in planning and implementing data collection on time use, as well as in the processing and analysis of the resulting data. Countries can use ICATUS as a guide in developing an activity classification for the first time or revising an existing one.
68. ICATUS does not replace national classifications but provides a framework for the international comparison of national statistics on time use. Where national classifications differ from the international classification, comparability may be achieved by regrouping figures obtained under national classifications.
69. ICATUS may be expanded or contracted, depending on the social, cultural and economic situation of a country. ICATUS may be contracted by combining the groups of selected divisions into fewer or less detailed groups, or by entirely consolidating groups into divisions. By contrast, countries can expand the groups of activities under the three-digit categories by adding levels to take into account the need for greater detail.
70. Although countries are expected to adapt the proposed international classification to their national social and economic realities, every effort should be made to maintain international comparability at different levels of aggregation.

XII. Implementation, maintenance and dissemination of ICATUS 2016

71. During several consultations, experts requested the development of standard instruments and additional material to assist countries looking for guidance on the collection of data on time use.
72. In response to those requests, the Statistics Division, supported by the Statistical Commission, pursuant to its decision 48/109, plans to update and pilot in selected countries a set of guidelines for producing time-use statistics by 2022. The guidelines will be based on the 2005

Guide to Producing Statistics on Time Use: Measuring Paid and Unpaid Work; the 2013 ECE Guidelines for Harmonizing Time-Use Surveys; the 19th ICLS implementation guidelines; and other relevant material. The guidelines will focus in particular on methods of producing time-use data using innovative approaches and the latest technologies. The Statistics Division, as custodian of ICATUS 2016, will assist countries in their efforts to adopt or adapt the Classification for the production of their time-use statistics.

73. ICATUS has been developed in line with the most recent statistical concepts and standards. It is believed that current categories will remain unchanged unless major methodological developments are reflected. However, the pilots in selected countries as described in the previous paragraphs will help to set a time frame for future reviews.
74. ICATUS 2016 is available at <https://unstats.un.org/unsd/demographic-social/time-use/icatus-2016>.

2	Production of goods for own final use
Definition	Refers to activities to produce goods for own final use where the intended destination of the output is mainly for final use by the producer in the form of capital formation, or final consumption by household members, or by family members living in other households. Production of ‘goods’ is defined within the 2008 System of National Accounts production boundary and covers: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>(i) producing and/or processing for storage agricultural, fishing, hunting and gathering products;</li> <li>(ii) collecting and/or processing for storage mining and forestry products, including firewood and other fuels;</li> <li>(iii) fetching water from natural and other sources;</li> <li>(iv) manufacturing household goods (such as furniture, textiles, clothing, footwear, pottery or other durables, including boats and canoes);</li> <li>(v) building or effecting major repairs to one’s own dwelling, farm buildings, etc.</li> </ul> ‘For own final use’ is interpreted as production where the intended destination of the output is mainly for final use by the producer in the form of capital formation, or final consumption by household members, or by family members living in other households: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>(i) the intended destination of the output is established in reference to the specific goods produced or services provided, as self-declared (i.e. mainly for own final use);</li> <li>(ii) in the case of agricultural, fishing, hunting or gathering goods intended mainly for own consumption, a part or surplus may nevertheless be sold or bartered.</li> </ul> Note: In these divisions of activities it is assumed that working time arrangements are generally more informal or flexible compared to those in major division 1. Thus, this major division does not include specific groups for short breaks and for lunch breaks. Activities associated with such breaks from work are classified in the corresponding class; for example, eating a snack is classified under 921 Eating meals/snack. Application: The production of goods intended for both own consumption and for sale or barter, should be classified in major division 1 if the main intended destination is for sale, and in major division 2 if the main intended destination is own use. If some goods produced in a household enterprise are mainly for sale and others are mainly for own use, the production of the products for sale should be classified in major division 1, Employment and related activities.
